BFA Show

Alexandra Dulski
z1862097@students.niu.edu

Follow this and additional works at: https://huskiecommons.lib.niu.edu/art-studentprojects

Part of the Art and Design Commons, and the Photography Commons

Recommended Citation
Dulski, Alexandra, "BFA Show" (2023). Student Projects. 67.
https://huskiecommons.lib.niu.edu/art-studentprojects/67

This Photograph is brought to you for free and open access by the School of Art at Huskie Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Student Projects by an authorized administrator of Huskie Commons. For more information, please contact jschumacher@niu.edu.
The works in this series explore and question gender roles and stereotypes within work and domestic environments. Throughout history, men have been the breadwinners who come home to a fully cooked meal made by a woman. But today, everyone has career goals no matter their gender identity. Women have worked hard to break down barriers put up in male-dominated work environments, such as in the sports industry. Similarly, men are now able to explore hobbies and careers that had a feminine label in the past, such as taking care of the housework and cooking.

Although we’ve made great progress as a society, there are still issues that need to be talked about more often to keep moving in a positive direction. Many environments can be toxic for someone who is a minority within a group of individuals. If people instead chose to celebrate everyone’s individual successes life would be different. From the females who work in the male-dominated sports industry to males who take care of the housework and cooking, many have found their own success in life despite society saying, “you can’t”.

Alexandra Dulski
Alexandra Dulski, Alex, archival inkjet print, 20 x 16 in. 2023
Alexandra Dulski, Noah, archival inkjet print, 20 x 16 in. 2023
Alexandra Dulski, Terika, archival inkjet print, 20 x 16 in. 2023
Alexandra Dulski, Gamer, archival inkjet print, 20 x 16 in. 2023
Alexandra Dulski, Jamie, archival inkjet print, 16 x 20 in. 2023
Alexandra Dulski, Bartender, archival inkjet print, 20 x 16 in. 2023