Help CSEAS grow for the next 50

The next half-century for Southeast Asian Studies at NIU will offer exciting opportunities for teaching and learning about this rising region of the world. To keep NIU's program strong, consider making a donation to CSEAS through the NIU Foundation. To contribute by phone or by mail, go to the How to Make a Gift section of the NIU Foundation website. To make a gift online, go to the Make a Gift Now section. Click on "Make a Gift Now." Within the pop-up box, designate your gift by selecting "a specific area," then "university wide programs," then "Center for Southeast Asian Studies." Enter an amount and complete the process. All gifts, large and small, are greatly appreciated.

1. This week's lecture: Deported Khmer Americans and their new lives in Cambodia

In the field in Cambodia, graduate student Jordan York makes a new friend.

Jordan York (MA candidate, anthropology) will present Deported Khmer Americans and Their Stories at noon Friday, Feb. 8, in Room 110 (Honors office), Campus Life Building. York went to Cambodia in summer 2012 to interview Cambodian men and women who had been deported from the United States back to a homeland they barely knew, not to mention the language, local practices and general rules of behavior in Khmer society. His talk will be a reflection of his research into the deep impact of their new circumstances on their lives and cultural identities. To order an Indonesian lunch, please submit an online request by 6 p.m. Thursday at CSEAS Brown Bag Lunch Order. Orders must be cancelled online by 10 a.m. Friday. Lunches that are not picked up and have not been cancelled must still be paid for. Cost is $5 for students and $6 for faculty, staff and others. Payments may be made in cash or by check. For details, e-mail seabrownbag@gmail.com.

2. Study cultural anthropology field methods in Cambodia this summer

CSEAS Director Judy Ledgerwood (anthropology) will lead a four-week ethnographic field school this summer in Cambodia from June 15 to July 13. Focusing on the rebirth of Cambodian Buddhism, participants will study Cambodian culture, religion, and various field-study methods, including surveys, interviews and observation. A collaborative project with the Royal University of Fine Arts (RUFA) in Phnom Penh, the field school is open to both RUFA and American students from NIU and other U.S. institutions.

“The 2013 field school is very similar to previous field schools in Cambodia in that it is in collaboration the Royal University of Fine Arts and it is an anthropology field methods class,” Ledgerwood said. “But it is new in that we hope to conduct the field work in a new area and to possibly include Muslim communities as well as Buddhist communities. The range is thus wider, looking at the re-establishment of religion over the last 20 years. We will conclude as usual with a visit to Angkor Wat and the other temples in the Angkor region.” Advanced undergraduate students or graduate students from all majors and colleges are welcome to apply. More details and online link to apply are available through NIU Study Abroad. Deadline to apply: April 1. Three to six hours of undergraduate or graduate credit will be awarded for satisfactory participation in the program. For details, email Ledgerwood at jledgerw@niu.edu.

For information and applications, contact the Study Abroad Office, 417 Williston Hall; or e-mail niuabroad@niu.edu. Learn more about studying abroad at Study Abroad 101, a one-time session that meets at 3:30 p.m. Wednesdays and Thursdays in 417 Williston.

3. Divining democracy through data: Lecture this week by Notre Dame political scientist

Coppedge

Michael Coppedge, political scientist at the University of Notre Dame and principal investigator on the Varieties of Democracy Project at Notre Dame's Kellogg Institute, will discuss "What Can We Learn about Burma/Myanmar from Varieties of Democracy Data?" from 5 to 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7, in Room 190 at Barsema Alumni and Visitors Center. The Varieties of Democracy (V-Dem) Project is aimed at producing hundreds of indicators about political regimes for all countries and colonies in the world from 1900 to the present.

Most of the coding is done by nationals of, or residents in, the countries they code, using globally shared standards for various types of democracy, according to NIU political scientist Robert Brathwaite. V-Dem data are designed to give its intended users—researchers, policymakers, NGOs, journalists, and students—a way to quickly identify political trends for any country and place them in historical and comparative perspective. Coppedge will show what might be gleaned from such data using V-Dem's pilot study data on Burma/Myanmar. The lecture is part of the Department of Political Science's Seminar on International Relations Series and is co-sponsored by the NIU Burma Interest Group.
