English translation –

p. 134:

“Statement of Anselmo Carabali, legal adult, single.

. . . (in Limbano’s crew there were) Carabalis, Lucumis, Minas, Araras, and Congolese. . . . They were working in the cane fields when the slave Beltran arrived. He had been in the casa de purga weeping and saying that the soldiers had tied up Facundo and had wounded him in the head. That was when the Lucumi slaves ran toward the buildings with Beltran, while those of other nationalities remained where they were . . .”
