

Northern Illinois University Law Review

Volume 8 | Issue 3

Article 13

7-1-1988

Vol. 8, no. 3, Summer 1988: Table of Contents

Northern Illinois University Law Review

Follow this and additional works at: <https://huskiecommons.lib.niu.edu/niulr>

Part of the Law Commons

Recommended Citation

Northern Illinois University Law Review (1988) "Vol. 8, no. 3, Summer 1988: Table of Contents," Northern Illinois University Law Review. Vol. 8: Iss. 3, Article 13.

Available at: <https://huskiecommons.lib.niu.edu/niulr/vol8/iss3/13>

This Other/Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by the College of Law at Huskie Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Northern Illinois University Law Review by an authorized editor of Huskie Commons. For more information, please contact jschumacher@niu.edu.

Northern Illinois University

Law Review

Volume 8

Summer 1988

Number 3

ARTICLES

Foreword 565
Leonard P. Strickman

Introduction 567
Samuel W. Witwer

The 1970 Illinois Constitution: Has It Made A Difference? . . 571
Ann Lousin

This Article provides an extensive overview of the 1970 Illinois Constitution dividing the document into ten topic areas. The Article explores the history, philosophy and politics which shaped the document, identifies most, if not all, of the important issues concerning the current Illinois Constitution, and analyzes its effectiveness in the years since its adoption in 1970.

The Power of State Constitutions in Protecting
Individual Rights 651
Stanley Mosk

Adapted from remarks presented at the annual joint meeting of the Illinois State Bar Association and the Illinois Judges Association in October, 1987, this Article emphasizes the important role state constitutions can play as an adjunct to the United States Constitution in protecting individual rights.

From Judicial Election to Merit Selection: A Time for Change in Illinois 665
Nancy Ford

This Article focuses on one of the paramount issues surrounding the 1970 Constitution. Illinois' current method of selecting judges by election is compared to selection by appointment. The Article analyzes the quality, accountability and independence of judges under both methods. While finding relatively little difference in quality or accountability under either system, the article concludes that greater judicial independence calls for a change to some form of appointive merit selection.

Illinois Home Rule and Taxation: A New Approach to Local Government Enabling Authority	709
James Banovetz and Thomas Kelty

This Article examines and assesses the use of the home rule powers which were granted to local governments by the 1970 Constitution. Focusing primarily on the power of taxation, the Article notes that the use of the home rule powers has been restrained and generally successful. The Article points to narrow judicial reactions, however, which may conflict with the apparent intent of the constitution's drafters to grant broad authority to local government under the home rule powers.

The Education Article of the 1970 Constitution: Selected Policy Issues for Consideration and Debate at the Next Constitutional Convention	731
B. Douglas Anderson

This Article examines and assesses the use of the home rule powers which were granted to local governments by the 1970 Constitution. Focusing primarily on the power of taxation, the Article notes that the use of the home rule powers has been restrained and generally successful. The Article points to narrow judicial reactions, however, which may conflict with the apparent intent of the constitution's drafters to grant broad authority to local government under the home rule powers.

Reconsidering the Amendatory Veto in Illinois	753
Jack R. Van Der Silk

This Article considers the controversy surrounding the governor's power of amendatory veto as provided in the 1970 Constitution, and whether this gives the governor too much power over pending legislation. The Article details the history and debate which led to the inclusion of this provision in the current constitutional document, explores the ways the amendatory veto has been used, and describes the ongoing battle between the legislature and the governor concerning its use. The Article concludes that procedural changes in the manner in which the power is used will result in a better balance between the two branches of government.

A Search for Accountability: Judicial Discipline Under the Judicial Article of the 1970 Illinois Constitution	781
Pinky Wassenberg

This Article addresses the authority of the Illinois Judicial Inquiry Board and the Illinois Courts Commission created by the 1970 Illinois Constitution. The Article focuses on the limitations placed on the authority of the Board and the Commission by the Illinois Supreme Court in the Harrod v. Illinois Courts Commission case, as well as the issue of who should be the final arbiter in matters concerning judicial discipline.

Limits on State Taxation and Spending: Implications for the Illinois
Constitutional Convention Referendum 801
J. Fred Giertz and David L. Chicoine

This Article considers the use of constitutional restraints on the state's power to tax and spend. The Article examines the effects of both traditional and specific limitations, and analyzes government growth rates, concluding that the traditional measures already in place in Illinois are adequate to control the size of state government without unduly restricting the state's ability to perform necessary governmental functions.

Increased and Accessible Judicial Rulemaking 817
Jeffrey A. Parness and Bruce Elliot Keller

This Article discusses the problems which result from vesting the authority for making procedural rules governing the Illinois courts in both the General Assembly and the Illinois Supreme Court. After examining the constitutional history and applying policy rationales, the Article suggests that the constitution should give various types of primary authority for judicial rulemaking to the judiciary, with only secondary authority afforded to the legislature.

The 1970 Illinois Constitution: First Two Decades—A Selected
Bibliography 845
Compiled by Ann Lousin